OFFICE OF ADMISSION AND FINANCIAL AID

Did you know that UD is ranked in the top 20 universities in the nation for providing internship opportunities? We know your students want hands-on experiences in college, so I wanted to share several ways for students to be involved here at UD.

Learn through Hands-On Training

We'll bring employers to students, so they can interview for internships (and eventually for jobs) right on campus. On campus, students can redefine business education, serve the community and take their skills to corporate America through Flyer Enterprises, the fourth-largest student-run business in the country.

Learn through Studying Abroad

Whether for a summer, semester or year, students can study, intern or volunteer in places all over the world. We'll even provide a study abroad scholarship, and students can study in China, Ireland or Spain at no additional cost.

Want to know about an opportunity that makes UD really special? We have an institute in China. Through the UD China Institute, students can spend a semester gaining an international perspective for today's job market. They'll be in a modern student apartment in Suzhou, a city where one-third of the world's Fortune 500 companies have offices, and learn from UD professors, international professionals and prominent leaders in innovation.

Learn through Innovation

Because of UD's top-tier talent, two Fortune 500 companies recently built research facilities right on campus. GE Aviation's facility is a $53 million Electrical Power Integrated Systems Center, and Emerson's is a $35 million innovation center.

Learn through Research

UD is a top-tier Catholic research institution, ranked No. 1 in the nation for sponsored engineering research and development. Students pursue one-of-a-kind research that matters with Fortune 500 companies GE Aviation and Emerson and through our 30 research centers and institutes.

With these hands-on learning opportunities, students gain the skills and tools needed to succeed. That's one reason 95 percent of students are employed, in graduate school or in a full-time graduate program within six months of graduation.

If you know students who might be interested in opportunities like these, please encourage them to schedule a visit to find out more. We would love to answer any questions they might have.

Sincerely,

Robert F. Durkle, '78, '85
Associate Vice President
Dean of Admission and Financial Aid
