

I've been talking to a few of your students about campus life at Truman State University — what it's like to live in the dorms, what the food is like, and the things to do on campus after class. I thought you might like to see what I've been saying:

- Because 98% of freshmen live on campus, living in one of our six residence halls is a great way to make friends. (And you can't beat the convenience!)
- Freshmen often adapt and feel connected to the Truman community through the many organizations and activities they can get involved with. Options include fraternities and sororities, community service, leadership training, intramural sports... the list of options goes on and on.
- The Student Advisors in the residence halls plan all kinds of activities to help students bond and develop a sort of "dorm spirit."

I think this student summed it up perfectly: "Having the community that I did on my floor really helped me adjust to college life my freshman year, and we still have so much fun together doing the most random things!"

Our students are proud to call Truman home. If there's anything I can do to help out with your students' college search, please let me know!
